BATMAN AND SUPERMAN

How do you like your latest free gift on this month's cover of I LOVE TO READ BATMAN AND SUPERMAN? It's a fab Bat-Signal drink coaster to protect wherever you put your glasses, cups or mugs!

This month we start with the action-packed adventure, Demolition Derby. Lex Luthor sends in a demolition team to raze Suicide Slum to the ground and make its inhabitants homeless. Superman comes to the rescue, but this will mean a big fight with the powerful demolition team. And to go with this story there's a great POSTER at the centre of the magazine of the Man of Steel battling with the demolition team!

With the story Multiple Choice, the Riddler is back leaving riddles around Gotham City for the police to solve. Batman and Robin help Detective Harvey Bullock to discover what the Prince of Puzzler's latest scam is so they can capture him before he outwits the police department.

If you're a fan of Batman & Robin - The Animated Series, you're in for a treat this month, as we've got five sets of the latest BATMAN AND ROBIN VIDEOS to give away to five lucky readers of I Love to Read Batman and Superman! Plus, starting this month, we're giving a fab set of reusable TaccaStacca BATMAN STICKERS to the sender of every picture, photograph or letter printed on the Heroes Hotline page!

Hobbs Bay, nicknamed Suicide Slum, is one of the poorest neighbourhoods in Metropolis.

KEEP IT DOWN, WILL YA? SOME PEOPLE ARE TRYIN' TO SLEEP!

BOOM

ONE OF THESE DAYS THAT MUSIC'S GONNA COME RIGHT THROUGH—

IN DEMOLITION DERBY.

CONSIDER THIS AN EVICTION NOTICE, MISTER, DELIVERED BY THE DEMOLITION TEAM!

BOOOOM!

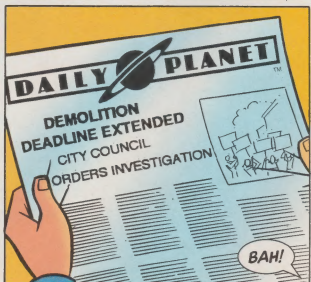

The residents were given two days to clear out by the mysterious new owner.

Covering the story for the Daily Planet newspaper were reporters Clark Kent and Lois Lane, and photographer Jimmy Olsen.

Jimmy had been born and raised on the tough streets of Suicide Slum.

Behind the scheme to level Suicide Slum was Superman's greatest enemy—Lex Luthor.

LET THEM INVESTIGATE! BY THE TIME THEY EVEN HOLD THEIR FIRST MEETING, SUICIDE SLUM WILL LIE IN RUINS!

MERCY, SEND IN THE DEMOLITION TEAM!

Luthor intended to build luxury flats where the slum stood, but most of all he wanted to eliminate all traces of his own poor childhood.

It was once again time for Clark Kent to act—as Superman.

STOP! UNTIL THE COURTS SAY OTHERWISE, THESE BUILDINGS STAY UP!

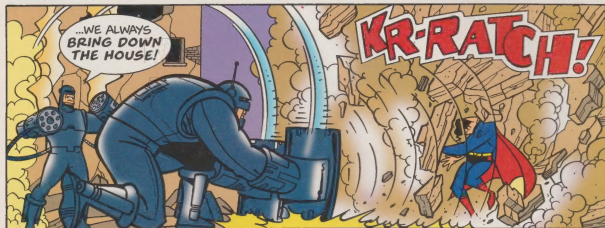

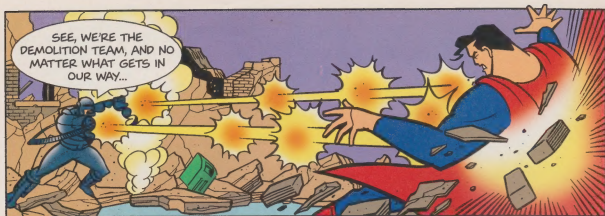

OUR EMPLOYER DISAGREES!

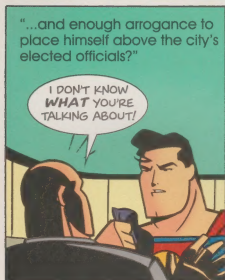

AND IN THIS CITY, WHAT HE SAYS, GOES!

NNFF!

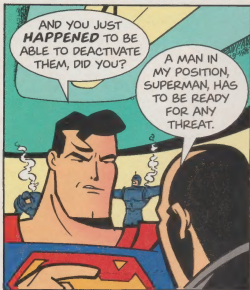

Luthor had built an auto-destruct device into the suits.

AND YOU JUST HAPPENED TO BE ABLE TO DEACTIVATE THEM, DID YOU?

A MAN IN MY POSITION, SUPERMAN, HAS TO BE READY FOR ANY THREAT.

OF COURSE, I WAS ONLY TOO PLEASED TO HELP THE CITIZENS OF METROPOLIS...

HEH! SUICIDE SLUM WILL STILL BE DUST BEFORE THE WEEK IS OUT!

But Lois Lane had been checking building records at Metropolis City Hall...

...and had discovered that several of the very old buildings were listed as city landmarks.

NO ONE CAN TOUCH THE AREA NOW.

WHO'D HAVE THOUGHT IT... MY OLD NEIGHBOURHOOD'S BECOME PART OF HISTORY!

THE END

FIND THE FACT

Solve the nine clues and fit the answers into the grid below. If you solve all the clues correctly, by cross-referencing the letters at the top of the grid with the numbers down the side, you will find corresponding letters (e.g. A1=m and H5=i). Put the correct letters in the boxes at the bottom of the page to reveal an interesting fact. All the words come from the story Multiple Choice.

1. You use this to pay for things.
2. You write these to friends.
3. This is your pay for work.
4. This chops up paper into strips.
5. Little pieces of paper thrown at weddings.
6. A place of work.
7. Another word for mail.
8. Printed pages bound together and read.
9. Strong thread usually made of metal.

Batman, Robin and Detective Harvey Bullock face a...

MULTIPLE CHOICE

Police Detective Harvey Bullock was having a bad day.

It had begun with a phone call that dragged him out of bed at 6AM on a bitterly cold Gotham morning. It got worse thanks to the half-full cup of coffee he'd spilled into his lap on the drive over, and now this.

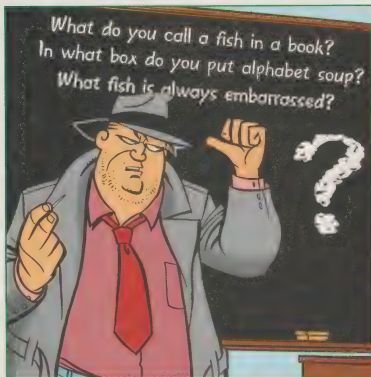

This he didn't need.

Someone had broken into the city's college, triggering the alarm. But far from removing anything, they'd left something behind.

Three riddles. Written on the blackboard in chalk:

WHAT DO YOU CALL A FISH IN A BOOK?

IN WHAT BOX DO YOU PUT ALPHABET SOUP?

WHAT FISH IS ALWAYS EMBARRASSED?

"Great," muttered Bullock to no one in particular, "I was never any good at multiple choice!"

It was no mystery who'd left the teasing messages for them to find. The Riddler had escaped from Arkham Asylum the previous day, and true to form, a clue to his next crime, in the shape of a deceptively child-like puzzle, had turned up.

But why three?

Rubbing his tired eyes, Bullock gave up trying to solve the riddles. He knew a man who had all the answers....

Across town, an armoured truck pulled to a stop outside the Central Gotham Post Office.

Inside, the guard rose to his feet and slid open the metal cover that allowed him to check outside before unlocking the truck's reinforced rear doors.

Long years of experience as both a cop and an employee of Lockfast Security Services had taught Vernon Straw to always be on his guard, especially when delivering some fifty thousand dollars in postal workers' wages. As he always told new recruits, "Learn to expect the unexpected."

The sight that greeted his eyes was certainly that.

Instead of the street scene he'd anticipated, instead of the sight of the driver and his back-up man signalling the all-clear, a piece of white paper covered the narrow slot. On it was written:

WHEN IS A DOOR NOT A DOOR?

Before he could react, the truck was rocked by an explosion that tore the doors from their moorings, sending Vernon flying backwards.

"When it's a jar," announced the Riddler with a showman's flourish, framed in the gaping hole that now formed the rear of the truck.

"I've heard that some questions," he continued, "are best left unanswered. Know why?"

Vernon just stared, the explosion having left him dazed and unable even to think straight.

"Because the truth hurts!" said the Riddler, beaming at the security guard.

As his henchmen began to unload the heavy leather money sacks, the Riddler's mood abruptly changed. This was too easy, he thought. Where was the excitement, the challenge?

And where, more importantly, was—

"Batman!" exclaimed one henchman, as his colleague was suddenly knocked out by a Batarang.

"Ahh," sighed the Riddler with some satisfaction, seeing Batman and Robin move in. "Now the fun really begins...."

As Batman executed a perfect flip that left one goon punching only empty air, he called to Robin, "What do you call a fish in a book?"

"A read herring," replied Robin, banging one goon's head against another's.

"And an embarrassed fish?" continued Batman, knocking the floundering henchman's legs from under him.

"A red herring," said Robin, completing the pair of false clues.

"Which leaves, 'In what box do you put alphabet soup?'" said Bullock, stepping from his car in time to neatly trip up and handcuff the last of the Riddler's men.

Robin opened his mouth to answer but Bullock beat him to it. "In a letter box, hence the Post Office. I may not be the sharpest tool in the box, kid, but I get there in the end."

Batman and Robin turned to confront the Riddler himself, who was watching from the main doors leading into the Post Office itself.

"Bravo," called the Riddler, clapping his hands delightedly. "But the game's only just begun. Step right up. Plenty more riddles right this way..."

And with that, the Riddler disappeared inside the Post Office.

As Batman and Robin started off in pursuit, Bullock glowered, "Creep's toyin' with us," he yelled after the Dynamic Duo. "And we're playin' right along."

Inside, further evidence of the Riddler's intricate trap was plain to see. The postmaster and two of his counter staff had been tied to three moving conveyor belts that led away from the service windows and disappeared into the sorting office that lay beyond.

The Riddler was standing nearby, clearly enjoying every moment.

He gestured in the direction of the sorting office. "At the end of each of these conveyor belts," he explained, "there is a shredder...and a sharp end to these promising careers. In just a matter of seconds, all three employees will...well...see for yourselves."

Batman, Robin and Bullock watched open-mouthed as a thick pile of letters disappeared into the sorting office, where they were promptly reduced to little more than confetti.

"You have a choice," continued the Riddler. "In fact you have a multiple choice. There are three of you and three riddles, one for each conveyor belt. Between you, you have just enough time to solve them and avert three untimely ends."

"Or," he added, turning to leave, "you could try and stop me escaping with the loot."

They had no choice. They all knew that the safety of the employees had to come first. But as he moved, Bullock's earlier words echoed in Batman's ears. "Creep's toyin' with us," Bullock had said. "And we're playin' right along!"

Outside, the Riddler calmly strolled over to the discarded money sacks, and began loading them into his getaway car. In the distance he could hear sirens, but they would be too late. As he reached out a hand to retrieve the last bag, Robin swung in, knocking it from his grasp.

"No!" howled the Riddler, "you couldn't have solved all the riddles, not this soon!"

A Batarang, attached to a thin but super-strong wire, looped through the air, winding the wire tighter and tighter around the Prince of Puzzlers.

"As you're so fond of pointing out, Riddler," said Batman, "there are always options."

"Bullock was right," explained Robin. "It was time to stop playing by your rules. Once you were out of sight we got to the hydraulics that drive the conveyor belts. You jam one, say with a Batarang, you jam them all!"

The Riddler, his arms bound tightly to his body, could only fume in silence as Bullock dragged him towards the arriving police cars.

"Now it's my turn," said Bullock, "and I'll give you one guess where you're going!"

THE END

City Police Department

Known Relatives:

None

Base of Operations:

Gotham City

Height: 6' 0"

Weight: 130 kilos

Eyes: Black

Hair: Black

Background:

In his own crude way, Harvey Bullock is a good detective. He just can't get it through his thick head that Gotham City needs someone like Batman. Believing his police badge to be a legal license to break the rules, Harvey resents the Dark Knight as an unauthorised meddler who is muscling in on his territory. Sometimes, usually after Batman has saved his skin, Harvey will admit to a grudging respect for the guy. Truth is, Harvey is jealous of Batman, and the way he operates above the law.
